

As an Amateur Radio operator for the past 45 years, there is already enough noise generated by power lines that we don't need any additional rf being generated and carried by power lines. I live in somewhat of a rural area and would very much like to have broadband access (currently unavailable via phone or cable) but not by jeopardizing amateur radio or creating any other rf interference.